
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “International Human Rights Defense Act of 2015”.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:
(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(2) GENDER IDENTITY.—The term “gender identity” means the gender-related identity, appearance, or mannerisms or other gender-related characteristics of an individual, with or without regard to the individual’s designated sex at birth.

(3) LGBT.—The term “LGBT” means lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender.

(4) SEXUAL ORIENTATION.—The term “sexual orientation” means homosexuality, heterosexuality, or bisexuality.

SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Eighty-two countries prohibit the public support of the LGBT community, promote homophobia across society, or criminalize homosex-
(2) In seven countries, homosexuality is a crime that is punishable by death.

(3) Around the world, LGBT people face discrimination, hatred, violence, and bigotry.

(4) Violence and discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity are documented in the Department of State’s annual Human Rights Report to Congress. The 2013 report continues to show a clear pattern of increased human rights violations in every region of the world based on sexual orientation and gender identity. These violations include murder, rape, torture, death threats, extortion, imprisonment, as well as loss of employment, housing, access to health care, and other forms of societal stigma and discrimination. The report further documents growing LGBT-specific restrictions on basic freedoms of assembly, press, and speech in every region of the world.

(5) In Jamaica and other countries, discrimination against LGBT people, including “corrective rape” of lesbian women, occurs all too frequently and with relative impunity.
(6) In 2013, the Government of the Russian Federation passed a law banning “Homosexual Propaganda”, which effectively makes it a crime to publically support LGBT equality. The Russian law is the basis for similar anti-propaganda legislation threatened or introduced in countries across Eastern Europe and Central Asia, including Lithuania, Kyrgyzstan, and Belarus.

(7) In February 2014, the Government of Uganda adopted a law that makes “aggravated homosexuality” a crime punishable with life imprisonment and endangers any individual arbitrarily found to support LGBT people. Concurrently, the Government of Uganda also passed laws severely limiting the basic freedoms of speech and assembly for LGBT citizens. While the Constitutional Court overturned this law on a technicality in August 2014, leaders in Uganda have pledged to pursue similar legislation, and LGBT persons continue to be subjected to discrimination and violence.

(8) The Government of Gambia passed an “aggravated homosexuality” law in October 2014. The conditions in Gambia for LGBT persons have been deteriorating, and there have been troubling reports of LGBT individuals having been arrested and threatened with torture for their sexual orientation and gender identity.

(9) In December 2013, the Government of Nigeria adopted a law further criminalizing homosexuality. The law also criminalizes supporting LGBT people in any way, endangering the neighbors, friends, doctors, and landlords of LGBT people.

(10) The anti-homosexuality laws in Gambia, Nigeria, and elsewhere not only endanger all LGBT individuals in those countries, but also pose serious risks for those associated with or caring for LGBT people. In addition, international HIV workers could be at risk since the treatment of at-risk populations may constitute support for LGBT people. Studies have shown that when LGBT people, especially LGBT youth, face discrimination, they are less likely to seek HIV testing, prevention, and treatment services.

(11) On December 6, 2011, President Barack Obama released the Presidential Memorandum—International Initiatives to Advance the Human Rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Persons. The memorandum directed all Federal agencies engaged abroad to ensure that United States diplomacy and foreign assistance promote and protect the human rights of LGBT persons.

(12) Secretary of State John Kerry announced that the United States Government would review United States diplomatic relationships with Nigeria and Uganda in light of their recent anti-LGBT actions. Announcements by the Obama Administration on March 23, 2014, and June 19, 2014, indicated the United States Government would emphasize the importance of human rights in Uganda by cutting $6,400,000 in funding for the Interreligious Council of Uganda because of its support for the Anti-Homosexuality Act, halting a survey designed to minimize the spread of HIV/AIDS because of potential harm to respondents, imposing short-term travel bans on Ugandan military officials, halting some joint military exercises with the Ugandan military, relocating funds for a public health institute, and restricting entry into the United States of those specific individuals who have committed human rights violations against LGBT persons. Despite the recent anti-LGBT actions by the Government of Nigeria, President Obama has not conducted a similar review of the United States’ diplomatic relationship with that country or taken steps to emphasize the importance of human rights for LGBT persons there.

(13) In December 2013, the Supreme Court of India reversed a lower court ruling and reinstated the criminalization of homosexuality in the second most populous nation on Earth. In April 2014, India’s Supreme Court recognized transgender people as a third gender, improving the legal rights of transgender people in that country. Given these two court decisions, the degree of human rights protections for LGBT persons in India is uncertain.

(14) Removing institutionalized discrimination and targeted persecution against LGBT people around the world is a critical step in the promotion of human rights and global health internationally.

(15) According to the Trans Murder Monitoring Project, which monitors homicides of transgender individuals, 226 transgender persons were killed between November 2013 and November 2014 worldwide. Violence against transgender individuals is particularly alarming in Brazil, where 113 transgender individuals were murdered in the one-year period from October 1, 2013, to September 30, 2014.
(16) According to the International Guidelines on HIV/AIDS and Human Rights, as published by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, countries should review and reform criminal laws and correctional systems to ensure that they are consistent with international human rights obligations and are not misused in the context of HIV or targeted against vulnerable groups.

(17) For the world’s 1,800,000,000 youth, anti-homosexuality laws and discrimination against LGBT persons poses significant risks. LGBT youth who come out to their family or community often face rejection, homelessness, and limited educational and economic opportunities. These factors contribute to increased risks of substance abuse, suicide, and HIV infection among LGBT youth.

(18) On September 26, 2014, the United Nations Human Rights Council passed a resolution co-sponsored by the United States that expressed concern about discrimination and violence experienced by LGBT persons around the world. Fourteen countries opposed the resolution, including Algeria, Botswana, Cote d’Ivoire, Ethiopia, Gabon, Indonesia, Kenya, Kuwait, Maldives, Morocco, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, and the Russian Federation.

SEC. 4. STATEMENT OF POLICY.

It is the policy of the United States—international programs establish appropriate policies and take effective measures to ensure the protection and safety of their staff and workplace, including from discrimination and violence directed against LGBT people and those who provide services to them;

(12) to ensure that international efforts to combat HIV/AIDS take all appropriate measures to support at-risk communities, including LGBT persons, and to create enabling legal environments for these communities;

(13) to work with governments and nongovernmental partners around the world to develop and implement regional strategies to decriminalize homosexuality and to counteract the prohibition of public support of the LGBT community; and
(14) to ensure that those who have a well-founded fear of persecution on account of being LGBT or supporting LGBT rights have the opportunity to seek protection in the United States.
